Domicile is defined as a "person's true, fixed and permanent living place; the place to which a person intends to return after temporary absences. A person may have only one domicile at a time." Students have the burden of proving domicile and must develop a preponderance of evidence to support their appeal for residency status.

Each of the following facts and circumstances will be considered when responding to a petition for in-state tuition. No ONE of these factors is either necessary or sufficient to support a claim for in-state tuition.

- a. Continuous presence in Minnesota during a period when not enrolled as a student.
- b. Sources for financial support are generated within Minnesota.
- c. Domicile in Minnesota of family, guardian, or other relatives or persons legally responsible for the student.
- d. Ownership of a home in Minnesota.
- e. Permanent residence in Minnesota.

The following circumstance, standing alone, shall not constitute sufficient evidence of domicile to affect eligibility for in-state tuition under the regulations but may be considered as part of the demonstration of the facts and circumstances listed above:

- a. Voting or registration for voting.
- b. The lease of living quarters.
- c. A statement of intention to acquire a domicile in Minnesota.
- d. Domicile of student's spouse in Minnesota.
